

Windows of Perception Tracking beyond the Neo Cortex

Workshop with Ale Duarte On the Greek island of Naxos, 29th August to 3rd September 2014

"Tracking" is one of the most fundamental skills in any therapeutic somatic practice. We use it to modulate and monitor our own sensations and guide our clients through their process, by facilitating autonomic nervous system resolution.

The following questions are always considered:

-As therapists, how do we guide our clients into their inner world and bring them back safely? -What do we notice in our client's body language that is a cue for therapeutic intervention? -How do we rescue our clients from being stuck in the 'traumatic vortex', promote discharge and flow, as well as create trust in a therapeutic relationship?

This workshop will help you to explore your own answers to these questions, based on your personal experience, and to track the client through their 'experiential reality'. Looking for several windows of perception to broaden the tracking skills by inviting and evolving our intuitive, creative nature.

This experiential workshop will use movement, music, videos, group interaction & selfexploration to reveal what's hidden beneath sensations, posture, language & facial expressions. Skills and techniques that can be used in each situation will be demonstrated and practiced during the workshop, and participants will be offered an environment to embody their experiences while moving between the 'inner' and 'outer' world.

Ale Duarte

Ale Duarte (ale@aleduarte.com), is a member of the Foundation of Human Enrichment (http://www.traumahealing.com) and has worked extensively in trauma outreach, leading somatic-healing workshops for both professionals and victims affected by recent natural disasters (earthquakes, tsunamis, floods) in China, Thailand, India, Brazil and New Orleans. He is also a collaborator with Dr. Peter Levine and Maggie Kline on their latest book "Trauma Through a Child's Eyes" released in 2006. As an educator, he has worked with children since 1987, integrating his knowledge of child development with his skills as a somatic therapist. http://www.aleduarte.com/ See Ale on You Tube: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v98TQ3xF5fU og www.aleduarte.com

Participants will:

- Learn to use the 'multi-tasking mind' and Ale's concept of "windows" to create 'flow' in the system, prepare the he client for deeper experiences and assess outlets for discharge.
- Refine the use of language as a way to deepen the client's experience.
- Read the client's cues during the session with more accuracy.
- How to feel at ease with "intuitive tracking" during the process.
- broaden their understanding of the somatic process.

This workshop will take place in the small, beautiful village of Apollonas on the Greek island of Naxos. Naxos invites work with deep issues of trauma, mindfulness and healing, supported by the ancient Greek mythology full of archetypes, the powerful nature and the people with their kindness and hospitality.

We will arrange an excursion day in the middle of the workshop, which gives you even more opportunities to deepen the insights of the work. We will include the local people in the arrangements around the workshop as much as possible.

The last evening there will be a dinner invitation after the closure at the seminar place and some kind of live music and celebration.
